

Working with FDA, Standard Homeopathic Company Voluntarily Recalls Hyland's Teething Tablets to Address Manufacturing Process

Los Angeles, October 23, 2010 - Standard Homeopathic Company, in consultation with the U.S. Food and Drug Administration (FDA), is voluntarily recalling its Hyland's Teething Tablets. The company is initiating this recall in an abundance of caution due to an FDA investigation of its manufacturing facility. Hyland's Teething Tablets are manufactured in the United States and distributed throughout North America.

The Hyland's Teething Tablets UPC codes included in the recall are:

- Hyland's Teething Tablets, 125 tablets, UPC # 3 54973 75041
- Hyland's Teething Tablets, 250 tablets, UPC # 3 54973 75042

Adverse events have been reported but the FDA has said that a conclusive link has not been determined. The company, in working with the FDA, has identified manufacturing processes of Teething Tablets that can be improved to ensure uniformity in dosage. As a homeopathic product, Hyland's Teething Tablets have a wide margin of safety that protects consumers from harm.

After in-depth analysis, a comprehensive review of the company's adverse event report log, and more than 85 years of safe usage, the company is confident that Hyland's Teething Tablets are safe for infants and toddlers.

In addition to the product recall, Standard Homeopathic Company is refining its production, packaging and testing protocols. Throughout the process, Standard Homeopathic Company will continue to closely monitor and evaluate the situation and consult with FDA.
